NOTES TO THE READER.

I. The Astronomical calculations in this work are made to true clock time. The effects of Refraction, according to the latest improved Tables of Bessel, and the Equation of time, have both been applied to the times of the Sun's rising and setting: so that the Almanac, and a good clock, will agree the year round.

II. A Time-piece may be set very nearly true by the rising, setting, or southing of the Sun, Moon, or Stars,—but more accurately by the Sun (or the southing of the Sun, or a fixed Star), anywhere on or near the 40th degree of north latitude.

III. The time of the rising, setting, or southing of a fixed Star, may be carried several days forward by subtracting, or backward by adding, 4 minutes per day.

IV. The common day of 24 hours, begins at midnight, and morning (marked morn.) continues from midnight till noon; and afternoon (marked aft.) continues from noon till midnight; this should be remembered carefully when looking for the times of the rising, setting, or southing of the Moon or Stars soon after midnight.

ECLIPSES.

In the year 1885 there will be four eclipses, two of the Sun and two of the Moon.

I. An annular Eclipse of the Sun on the 16th of Third Month, visible as follows: At Boston, begins 0h. 35m., ends 3h. 11m. p. m.; Philadelphia, begins 0h. 12m., ends 2h. 44m. p. m.; Washington, begins 11h. 56m. a. m., ends 2h. 27m. p. m. Digits Eclipsed $6\frac{1}{2}$ North Limb.

II. A partial Eclipse of the Moon on the 30th of Third Month, invisible on this Continent, visible in Asia.

III. A total Eclipse of the Sun on the 8th of Ninth Month, invisible here, visible and total in New Zealand and South Pacific Ocean.

IV. A partial Eclipse of the Moon on the 24th of Ninth Month, in the morning, visible as follows:

Anthony Benezet

Was born in 1713, in St. Quintin, in France. In 1715 he was taken by his parents to Holland, and after a few months residence in Rotterdam the family removed to London.

At the age of 14 he was united in membership with the Society of Friends. In 1731 the family came to Philadelphia, and in 1736 Anthony married Joyce Marriott. In 1739 he removed to Wilmington, where he engaged in a branch of manufacture, but a few months afterward returned to Phila.

In his 26th year he undertook the instruction of youth at Germantown.

In 1742 he became a teacher in Friends' Public School, in Philadelphia.

In 1755 he established a school for the instruction of females. He gave up his school in 1766 and removed to Burlington, but returned to Philadelphia the next year.

He resumed his business of teaching school in Philadelphia, and for the last two years of his life was engaged in a school for the instruction of persons of color. He died in 1784, aged 71 years.

Benezet's first attempts to enlighten the public mind were made by composing and circulating, through the medium of almanacs and newspapers, detached pieces concerning the unlawfulness of slavery. He afterward published books and pamphlets on various subjects. Many of these he distributed to persons of distinction, and to those in humble life gratuitously where he apprehended they would be serviceable. Several were in reference to slavery, war, use and abuse of liquors, Short Account of People called

OVERCOME EVIL WITH GOOD.

William Savery, a minister among the Quakers, was by trade a tanner. One night, having had some hides stolen from his premises, he caused the following advertisement to appear in the newspaper a few days after:—"Whoever stole a quantity of hides on the fifth of the present month, is hereby informed that the owner of the same has a sincere desire to be his friend; if poverty tempted him to this false step, the owner will keep the whole transaction secret, and will gladly put him in the way of obtaining money by means more likely to bring credit and peace of mind."

This singular advertisement attracted considerable attention, but the culprit alone knew who had made the kind offer. When he read it, his heart melted within him, and he was filled with sorrow. A few nights afterwards, as the good tanner's family were about to retire, they heard a timid knock, and upon opening the door, beheld a man standing there, with hides on his shoulder. With his head downwards he said, "I have brought these back, Mr. S., where shall I put them?" "Wait till I get a lantern, and I will go with thee," replied the good man. When they returned from the barn, they found the Quaker's wife had made ready some supper, which she desired this poor fallen man to partake of, saying, "It will be good for thee." He turned his back toward her, and could not speak for some time. At length he said to her, in a choked voice, "It is the first time I ever stole anything, and have felt bad about it ever since. I'm sure I never thought I should come to this; but I took to drinking and quarrelling, and since I began the down-hill course everybody gives me a kick. You are the first man that has offered me a helping hand. It is the first time I ever was a thief." — "Let it be the last, my friend," said Mr. S. "Thou art young, and may yet make up lost time. Promise me thou wilt not drink intoxicating liquor for a year, and I will employ thee to-morrow on good wages." The promise was made and faithfully kept, master and man went on well together, till the death of the man, proving that good may overcome evil.— Mothers' Friend.

GOING TO HEADQUARTERS.—Before the reformation in Scotland, a good old gentlewoman, who had seen her better days, was reduced to the necessity of taking a small moorland farm under the Earl of Huntly, ancestor of the Duke of Gordon. On this barren spot the widow and her two sons, by their unwearied industry, contrived to glean a scanty subsistence. But, miserable as this dependance was, they were likely to be deprived of it by the practices of a greedy, ruthless land servant, or factor, as he is denominated in Scotland. This unfeeling man strained every nerve to dispossess the widow and her orphan children, and adopted as a method to attain his object, raising the rent almost beyond their means of paying.

In this emergency she applied to several persons who were said to possess the favor of the Earl; but all in vain. Seeing ruin inevitable, she summoned up resolution to wait on his lordship herself. The Earl, who was a man of bluff, open, and generous disposition, received her with great kindness, and, after some conversation, found her to be a person of superior sense and worth, and expressed much surprise that the poorest of his cot farms should be occupied by one who had most obviously moved in a higher sphere.

"But," quoth the worthy nobleman, "you must dine with me and my family to-day; I must let them see what sort of stuff at least one of my tenants is made of."

The astonished widow was very reluctant to accept the invitation; but the Earl would not be denied. She had the good fortune to make herself equally acceptable to the countess and all the family. After dinner she was shown over the castle, and finally was conducted into the chapel, where there was no lack of images. But fearfully scandalized were the feelings of the good woman when coming in front of the Virgin Mary, she saw her noble hostess and children sink down before it, as if a signal had been given for their immediate prostration. When they had ended their devotions, they were equally astonished at the unbending posture and horrified looks of their heretical guest.

The Earl, who had been absent, now made his appearance. Seeing how matters stood, he asked how she could be so neglectful of her duty to the Holy Virgin. Where could she find such an all-sufficient intercessor for sinful creatures as the blesssd mother of our Lord?

"Please your honors," quoth she, "allow me to answer ye in a homely way, but — by your favor — not so far, I reckon, from the subject in hand. Ye well know, my lord, that I have a small farm under your lordship; and for some years hard we had striven, my two boys and myself, to make two ends meet. Few as our comforts have been, they have been seasoned with content, which is a pleasant, though uncommon drop in the cup of poverty; but now we are to be turned out of house and home by a factor who shuts his ear to the widow's cry. I, too, have made supplications to intercessors of well-known power and favor with your honorable lordship. I have applied to little Sandy Gordon, and got neither solace nor satisfaction from him. In short, all has proved vanity and vexation of spirit. Before I and my bairns go forth, the sport of the winds of heaven, I now do what I should have done at the outset—I apply to the great Gordon himself."

This judicious and touching appeal produced an effect on the noble persons to whom it was made. The widow and her sons obtained a long lease of an excellent farm, on a rent merely nominal, and it is believed that her descendants enjoy it to this very day.

The common people in Aberdeenshire believe the conversion of the Gordon family from the Roman Catholic to the Protestant religion to be in no small degree owing to the above pithy address.— Southern Presbyterian.

The First Paper Maker.

The date of the invention of paper-making is not definitely known. The common wasp was, however, the inventor. The big wasps' nest, which was always kept at a safe distance, and often knocked down with a stone during the rambles of boyhood, was composed of actual paper of the most delicate and elegant kind. As spiders were spinners of gossamer webs of intricate and exquisite pattern when primitive man went about dressed in the shaggy skins of beasts, and could neither spin nor weave the beautiful and fine cloth fabrics of to-day, so little wasps, when people of a later and somewhat more advanced age had recourse to such rude and unsatisfactory substances as wood, stone, and brass, the bark of trees, and the hides of animals, on which to preserve memoranda, were making a material of far greater excellence.

They made their paper, too, by very nearly the same process employed by man at the present time. Indeed, several of our best discoveries in regard to building, architecture, and manufactures of various kinds, if they have not been derived from acute observation of the work of certain animals, including insects, have, when compared with their constructions and their manner of making them, been found to show a wonderfully close resemblance. The beaver gave men their earliest and most serviceable knowledge concerning dam building, and to-day no workman can surpass this animal's skill and precision in the erection of such structures.

Nature is a great teacher, and especially does the paper-making of the wasp illustrate how valuably suggestive she may sometimes be; for, assuredly, the wasp was the first to show that it did not always require rags to manufacture paper, that vegetable fibres answered for this purpose, and could be reduced to a pulp, and that to make the paper strong and tenacious, the fibres must be long.

The first thing the wasps do, when about to build a nest is to collect, with preference for old and dry wood, fibres about one-tenth of an inch long, and finer than a hair, and put them into bundles, which they increase as they continue on their way. These fibres they bruise into a sort of lint, and cement with a sizing of glue, after which they knead the material into paste, like papier-maché, and roll up a ball; this they trample with their feet into a leaf as thin as tissue paper.

The ceiling of the wasp's chamber, to the thickness of nearly two inches, is often constructed by putting one above another, fifteen or sixteen layers or sheets of this prepared paper, and between these layers spaces are left, so that it seems as if a number of little shells had been laid near one another. Next they build up a terrace composed of an immense number of the paper shells, until a light and elegant structure, like a honey-comb, has been constructed, and in the cells thus formed they rear their young.— The Paper World.

YOU MUST HAVE PATIENCE.

In this world of trial, how great is the need of patience! If we attempt to do good, it is not unlikely that our motives may be aspersed; we may be misunderstood, or aggravating obstacles are thrown in our way. In business, there are a thousand irritating circumstances which chafe and fret the soul. Men are dishonest, deceitful; employers are hard-hearted, exacting, fault finding; the employed are unfaithful, wasteful, insulting; debtors do not pay, and creditors are importunate. In the domestic circle, there is need of patience. The husband may be neglectful, unkind; the wife fretful, slatternly, extravagant, inconsiderate; the children turbulent, passionate, disobedient. There are, indeed, in every walk and department of life, briars and nettles that prickle and annoy, and to endure them and not be injured by them, we have need of patience. The philosophy of living well, is to use all blessings and all trials so as to work out our own good. But a foolish life is distinguished by perverting all blessings to a curse, and converting no curses into blessings. But to extract good from everything, and every circumstance, we must have patience.

It is not the great trials of life from which we receive the most injury; nor, indeed, is it under these that we need the most patience. We are more liable to be chafed by trifles, by little unexpected annoyances, the friction of daily life, events which will be lost sight of and forgotten after a wave or two of life's ocean has passed over us, than by the heavy blows of adversity. The severest test of patience comes from the smallest of life's trials. He that ruleth his spirit in the domestic circle, in the daily friction of business, midst the trials and cares of life, that come and go without any record in the diary, ledger, or biography, is greater than he who stands calmly and meets the mad storm of persecution, or is submerged by billows of adversity without complaint.

A troubled mind is often relieved by maintaining a cheerful demeanor. The effort withdraws its attention from the cause of pain, and the cheerfulness which it promotes in others extends by sympathy to itself.

It is safer to learn than to teach, and he who conceals his opinion has nothing to answer for.— Penn.

STRIVE, WAIT, AND PRAY.

Strive: yet I do not promise
The prize you dream of to-day,
Will not fade when you think to grasp it,
And melt in your hands away;
But another and holier treasure
You would now perchance disdain,
Will come when your toil is over,
And pay you for all your pain.

Wait: yet I do not tell you
The hour you long for now,
Will not come with its radiance vanished,
And a shadow upon its brow;
Yet far through the misty future,
With crown of starry light,
An hour of joy you know not
Is winging her silent flight.

Pray: though the gift you ask for
May never comfort your fears,
May never repay your pleading—
Yet pray, and with hopeful tears;
An answer, not that you long for,
But diviner, will come one day;
Your eyes are too dim to see it,
Yet strive, and wait, and pray.

Speak kindly in the morning; it lightens the cares of the day, and makes the household and its affairs move along more smoothly. Speak kindly at night, for it may be that before the dawn some loved one may finish his or her space for this world, and it will be to late to ask forgiveness.

We live no more of our time than we spend well—Carlyle.

[From the Bucks County Intelligencer].

LET US TRY TO BE HAPPY.

Let us try to be happy! We may, if we will,
Find some pleasure in life, to o'erbalance the ill;
There was never an evil, if well understood,
But what, rightly managed, would turn to a good.

If we were but as ready to look to the light,
As we are to sit moping because it is night,
We should own it in truth, both in word and in deed,
That who tries to be happy is sure to succeed.

I will try to be happy! Though shades of regret
Are sure to hang round, which I cannot forget,
There are times when the lightest of spirits must bow,
And the sunniest face wear a cloud on its brow.

We must never bid feelings, the purest and best,
To be blunted and cold in our bosoms at rest;
But the deeper our own griefs, the greater our need
To try to be happy, lest other hearts bleed.

Oh! try to be happy! It is not for long
We shall cheer on each other by counsel or song;
If we make the best use of the time that we may,
There is much we can do to enliven the way.

Let us only in earnestness each do our best,
Before God and our conscience, and trust for the rest;
Still taking His truth, both in word and in deed,
That who tries to be happy is sure to succeed.

No one of my fellows can do that special work for me which I have come into this world to do: he may do a higher work, but he cannot do my work. I cannot hand my work over to him, any more than I can hand over my responsibility or my gifts.—Ruskin.

MANAGING A CROSS NEIGHBOR.

I once owned a large flock of hens which I generally kept shut up. But one spring I concluded to let them run in my yard, after I had clipped their wings so that they could not fly. One day when I came home to dinner, I learned that one of my neighbors had been there full of wrath, to let me know my hens had been in his garden, and that he had killed several of them, and thrown them over into my yard. Greatly enraged at his procedure, I determined at once to be revenged, to sue him, or in some way get redress. I sat down and ate my dinner as calmly as I could; and by the time I had finished my meal, I became more cool, and thought perhaps it was best not to fight with my neighbor about hens, and thereby make him my bitter, lasting enemy. I concluded to try another way, being sure that it would be better.

After dinner I went to my neighbor, who was in his garden; and strange to say, he was in pursuit of one of my hens with a club, trying to kill it. I accosted him, and he turned upon me, his face inflamed with wrath, and said: "You have abused me. I will kill all your hens, if I can get at them. I never was so abused! My garden is ruined!"—"I am very sorry for it," said I; "I did not wish to injure you, and now I see I have made a great mistake in letting out my hens. I ask your forgiveness, and am willing to pay you six times the damage." The man seemed confounded; he looked up to the sky—then down to the earth—then at his neighbor — then at his club—and then at the hen he had been pursuing, and said nothing.

"Tell me, now," said I, "what is the damage, and I will pay you six-fold, and my hens shall trouble you no more. I will leave it entirely with you to say what I shall do, for I cannot afford to lose the love and good-will of my neighbors, and quarrel with them for hens, or anything else." — "I am a fool!" said the neighbor. "The damage is not worth talking about, and I have more need to compensate you than you me, and to ask your forgiveness than you mine."—Boston Peace Advocate.

DO YOUR BEST.

A gentleman once said to a physician, "I should think, doctor, that at night you would feel so worried over the work of the day, that you would not be able to sleep."

"My head hardly touches the pillow till I fall asleep," replied the physician. "I made up my mind," he continued, "at the commencement of my professional career, to do my best under all circumstances, and so doing, I am not troubled by any misgivings."

A good rule for us all to follow. Too many are disposed to say, "No matter how I do this work now; next time I'll do better." The practice is as bad as the reasoning. "No matter how I learn this lesson in the primary class; when I get into a higher department then I'll study." As well might the mother in knitting a stocking say, "No matter how the tip is done; even if I do drop a stitch now and then, I'll do better when I get further. along." What kind of a stocking would that be?

As well might the builder say, "I don't care how I make the foundation of this house; anything will do here; wait till I get to the top, then I'll do good work."

Said Sir Joshua Reynolds once to Dr. Samuel Johnson, "Pray tell me, sir, by what means have you attained such extraordinary accuracy and flow of language in the expression of your ideas?"

"I laid it down as a fixed rule," replied the doctor, "to do my best on every occasion, and in every company to impart what I know in the most forcible language I can put it."—Review and Herald.

TILL WE ALL COME TO THE PERFECT MAN.

The first and rudest fish was the prophecy of man, says Agassiz. The first and rudest man was the prophecy of Christ. "The seed of the woman shall bruise the serpent's head." The higher moral and spiritual life within him shall yet bring the animal nature into subjection. You say the prophecy is dim. So was the prophecy of man in the fish. But the patience and the power of God brought it to fulfillment. Omnipotence could not be defeated. The creative forces could not stay till they had reached the predetermined end. No more can the divine Wisdom and Love stay till they have reached the perfect man. The moral forces move under the same irresistible Will as the natural. The spiritual evolution will as certainly complete itself as the material. The one Creator is in both; one purpose runs through all. The divine ideal must be realized. Behold it in the Christ—behold THE MAN! And in him, O man, discover your own better self. He is the prophecy of what humanity was created to become. Feel the inspiration of that prophecy. It is for you. You are the heir of all the creative ages. Head of God's creation, image of his being, gifted with the powers of eternal progress, it rests with you to say whether you will be the perfection you see in the Christ. In the early stage of the moral creation now, it doth not yet appear what you shall be, but you shall be like Him, if you will. God's love in him beckons you upward. Let every day carry you higher—the senses mastered, the passions conquered, better purposes formed and fulfilled, nobler thoughts kindled, nobler aims cherished, Christ-like deeds done—so on and up along the path of limitless ascent.—L. Hamilton.

LETTER-WRITING.

We are constantly hearing complaints that the art of letter-writing has been lost, and that postal-cards have completed the revolution which cheap postage began. So photography was said to have killed portrait-painting; but it turns out that it only made havoc among the indifferent painters; the best portrait-painters have no rivals in the photographer. Letter-writing, in the same way, remains, and is capable of being highly cultivated; it can give as much delight as it ever did, and it certainly is one of the most enjoyable forms of literature. Now there are scores of cultivated women who might take up letter-writing as their companions take up water-color painting, or visiting among the poor; it is the natural expression of their powers, and we can think of no wiser kindness that such could do than to take, here and there, a younger friend or relative, less fortunate in resources, and make her the recipient of her long, leisurely, helpful letters. Such a correspondence, exacting no equal response, but only the attention and heed of the receiver, might well be a priceless opportunity to both. From how many a retired home there might go out thus influences for good not to be measured! Into such work the mind could throw itself with an ardor unknown to many even who write, year after year, for a listless public.—The Churchman.

Truth its Own Authority.—One deep difference between the old and new methods in education and religion is well brought out by a saying of Thomas Erskine, of Linlathen: "The only real instruction is that which helps us to perceive the truth and meanings of things, not that which merely asserts that such and such things are true, and insists on our accepting them as such."—Christian Register.

FRENCH WOMEN DEMAND ARBITRATION.

French women have sent an address to the President and members of the Council of Ministers, in which they say: "The women of France, who have no political voice—whom the law thus deprives of a sacred right—the women of France demand that their strong aspiration in favor of peace, and in favor of the masses being allowed to enjoy the fruits of their labor peaceably, be heard by the government. They demand the insertion of the principle of international arbitration in our treaties of commerce, so that henceforth all differences between our government and those of other nations may be pacifically and amicably arranged. The public conscience is awakening; experience has demonstrated that war settles nothing; that one war only begets another, whether it be that the conqueror in any conflict desires more fully to complete his conquest, or that the vanquished strives to retrieve his disaster; and it is upon the people, the masses, that the state of things presses continually. Permit us, therefore, gentlemen, to hope that in view of these considerations, you will recognize international arbitration to be the duty of all civilized governments, unless they desire to perish amid the upheaval of exasperated peoples. And if, for other nations, international arbitration is a necessity, it is for France a binding duty; and permit us to add, gentlemen, her very best and truest policy."—The Peacemaker.

The essential things that make up the good of human life are within the reach of us all. It is not God's fault, and it is not our neighbor's fault, if, instead of being sunny and trustful and patient, we allow ourselves to wither away, turning bitter and sour, and ungenial and unkindly in our personal life, our family life, or our public life.—M. J. Savage.

TRUE STANDARD OF SIMPLICITY.

"I believe myself called upon to bear an open, unequivocal, unflinching testimony, not only against all pride, extravagance, ostentation and excess, but also in a particular manner against all the secret insinuations and covered appearances, under which they are creeping in, and growing up amongst us as a Society. I have for years believed, that the declension among Friends from the true standard of simplicity is great; and I am of the mind, that if they had diligently hearkened unto and implicitly obeyed the dictates of best Wisdom, they would have been led to 'apply all the gifts of Divine Providence to the purposes for which they were intended.' I believe that it is my duty to live in such a humble, plain, homely, simple manner, as that neither in the furniture, food, or clothing used, any misapplication of the gifts of Divine Providence be admitted or encouraged."—John Barclay.

How far from here to heaven?
Not very far, my friend:
A single hearty step
Will all thy journey end.
Hold there! Where runnest thou?
Know heaven is in thee!
Seekest thou for God elsewhere?
His face thou'lt never see.
